

Helping People Makes Us Happy

(6B Holly Lin)

Yesterday, I went shopping in a shopping mall. I wanted to buy some CDs but I could not find the music shop. Suddenly, I saw a little girl and she was crying as loud as thunder. "What can I help you with? Where's your mum?" I asked. "I don't know where my mum is. I am scared," cried the girl.

"Don't cry! I will help you," said I gently and took the girl's hand. The girl followed me quietly. We walked around the shopping mall but we couldn't find the girl's mum so we went to the concierge. Soon we arrived at the concierge, "Excuse me, the girl has strayed away from her mum," I said. "Don't worry! Let me broadcast it to find your mum," said the staff.

After a while, a woman ran to us hurriedly. She saw the little girl next to me and hugged her tightly. "I am so sorry, dear!" said the woman. At last, I told the woman about her daughter. She thanked me for helping her find her daughter. "How can I ever repay you for your kindness?" she said sincerely. "You're welcome! Do you know where the music shop is?" I asked. She took me to the music shop and I bought my favourite CD. From this incident, I have learnt that it is rewarding to help others.
